

You

I have a former work colleague who revealed at work that she wants to start her own business in future. I also want to start my own business and so we agreed we could give tips and help each other out. We've arranged a short 10 minute call but what could we talk about?

Copilot

That's great that you both have entrepreneurial aspirations! Here are some ideas for your 10-minute call:

1. Current Status: Briefly share where each of you is in your business journey. Are you in the planning phase, or have you already started?
2. Business Ideas: Exchange your business ideas. Discuss what industries you're interested in and why.
3. Challenges: Talk about any challenges you're facing. This could be anything from finding funding to marketing strategies.
4. Resources: Share any useful resources you've found, such as books, podcasts, or online courses.
5. Networking: Discuss any networking events or groups that might be beneficial for both of you.
6. Next Steps: Outline your next steps and see if there are ways you can support each other in the coming weeks.
7. Future Meetings: Plan for future check-ins to keep each other motivated and accountable.

This should give you a solid structure for your call and ensure you make the most of your time together.

Good luck with your business ventures! 🚀

Is there a specific area of starting a business that you're particularly interested in?

Learn more: 1. linguaholic.com 2. www.indeed.com 3. blog.thecenterforsalesstrategy.com

You

we're both planning on starting in the intermediate future, so about 3 years or so, what would you say then regarding this additional piece of information as well

Copilot

Given that you both plan to start your businesses in about three years, you can tailor your conversation to focus on long-term planning and preparation. Here are some additional points to discuss:

1. Long-Term Goals: Share your long-term business goals and visions. Where do you see your businesses in five to ten years?
2. Skill Development: Identify any skills you need to develop over the next few years. This could include leadership, financial management, or industry-specific skills.
3. Market Research: Discuss how you plan to conduct market research to understand your target audience and competitors better.
4. Financial Planning: Talk about saving strategies and how you plan to secure funding when the time comes. This could include personal savings, loans, or investors.
5. Networking: Plan to attend industry events, join professional groups, or take part in online communities to build your network over time.
6. Mentorship: Consider finding mentors who can provide guidance and support as you prepare to launch your businesses.
7. Timeline and Milestones: Set a timeline with key milestones to track your progress over the next three years. This can help keep you both accountable and motivated.
8. Learning Resources: Share any courses, books, or workshops that could be beneficial for your business preparation.

By focusing on these areas, you can make the most of your call and set a strong foundation for your future businesses. ✨
Is there a specific industry you're both interested in, or are your business ideas quite different?